Important Notes & Sourcing Insights	① We advise against judging a supplier solely by their online transaction volume. Many true source factories primarily operate offline and enforce strict wholesale and customization MOQs, which naturally leads to fewer low-volume online orders. ② Insured Employees: Please note that the number of insured staff does not equate to the actual total factory workforce. Many Chinese manufacturers utilize seasonal workers, temporary labor, or outsourced production, which are not captured in the official online social security data. However, this metric remains highly important as it reflects the factory's core team of legally compliant, stable employees. A higher number of insured staff indicates lower legal risks, better corporate compliance, and stronger operational stability, making the supplier a much safer long-term partner. ③ Factory Size (*): Factory size is based on the seller's self-reported profile on 1688.com and has not been independently verified.
